Uregu Berbers in Morocco

The Uregu Berbers are one of the smaller Berber tribes who live in the southeastern part of Morocco. Berber society is primarily made up of farmers and merchants. As with other descendants of Subsaharan Africa, the Uregu Berbers are sometimes marginalized within Moroccan culture. Close knit Berber clans adhere to traditional customs, giving communities a strong sense of identity and loyalty. Most Berbers are Sunni Muslim, but many also believe in the presence of spirits called jinn.

Ministry Obstacles

Berber communities tend to be remote and socially isolated, making evangelism challenging.

Outreach Ideas

Believers can make disciples among the Berbers who have migrated to Moroccan towns and cities. They will be more effective at sharing the gospel in remote Berber communities.

Prayer Focus

Ask the Lord of the harvest to send laborers to the Uregu Berbers. Pray for the Holy Spirit to reveal Jesus through dreams and visions. Pray that tribal leaders and influential persons would receive Jesus and be able to impact the larger community with the gospel. The Berbers proudly call themselves the Amazigh, which means the "free people." Pray that they would discover true freedom through Jesus Christ.

SCRIPTURE After this, I heard what sounded like a vast crowd in heaven shouting, "Praise the Lord! Salvation and glory and power belong to our God." Rev 19:1

PRAY that many members of this people group join the vast crowd in heaven praising God for his glory, power and free gift of salvation.
